Help Stop the Zebra Mussel

The zebra mussel poses a multibillion-dollar threat to North America's industrial, agricultural, and municipal water supplies. First discovered in 1988 in the Great lakes, this invader has spread throughout the Mississippi and Ohio River basins in just 10 years. Public assistance in reporting zebra mussel sightings at new locations is essential in preventing its spread.

Zebra mussels look like small clams with a yellowish or brownish "D" shaped shell. They usually have alternating dark and light colored stripes. Larger specimens achieve lengths of two inches, but most will be under an inch. Zebra mussels usually grow in clusters. Zebra mussels are the only freshwater mollusk that can firmly attach to objects. They are commonly found on rocks, dock pilings, boat hulls, and water intakes pipes.

You can prevent the spread of the zebra mussel by routinely inspecting your boat and engine and rinsing or washing between put-ins. Drain water from the motor, live well, bilge and transom wells on land. Empty bait buckets on shore and do not take bait from one body of water to another

If you find a zebra mussel, note the date and precise location where the mussel was found. Take the mussel with you and store in rubbing alcohol. Immediately contact the nearest State wildlife department.
